

Nuclear Proliferation Statement Sorting

The nuclear non-proliferation treaty can only be successful if all the countries in the world sign up to it.

Nuclear electricity plants should not be allowed to use plutonium after it is made.

Each country should be allowed to decide for themselves if they test nuclear weapons or not.

Proper security and surveillance at a nuclear energy plant prevents the dangerous use of materials.

Countries that sell uranium are responsible for how the material gets used.

Nuclear products should not be used at all, either for peaceful energy creation or threatening means.
